

Hospital buys more property

By Larry Rowell

Staff Writer

The Casey County Hospital Board approved the purchase of two houses near the hospital, but after they were already purchased and despite a promise to the mayor and county judge/executive no more property would be purchased.

Board members granted approval at the June 12 regular meeting for the purchase of the Angel Hood property at 256 Montgomery St. and the home of Betty Jo Meeks at 132 Whipp Ave., for $85,000 and $65,000, respectively.

Casey Hospital CEO Rusty Tungate told board members that the hospital administration was presented with the two properties and moved to purchase them.

Tungate said that for now, the houses will be used for storage with a future use for parking.

However, the property acquisitions didn't sit well with Liberty Mayor Steve Sweeney who said that he had the word of Tungate and Hospital Board President Lonnie Mullins that the hospital wouldn't buy any more property.

“We had a meeting several years ago and we were told that the hospital wouldn't be buying any more property around the hospital,” Sweeney said.

Also present at the meeting was County Judge/Executive Ronald Wright who confirmed what Sweeney said.

“It was my understanding that they wouldn't buy any more property,” Wright said.

But Tungate said he understood the meeting to be about the immediate future and not several years later.

“I think what was said was we wouldn't be buying any property for a while,” he said.

Sweeney contends that the hospital purchasing property cuts into the city's tax base and income.

The Hood property was assessed in 2008 at

Summer Learning

The 21st Century Community Learning Centers' "Art, Archery, Drums & Dance" camp will culminate on Thursday with National Summer Learning Day. The public is invited to come out to the Casey County Middle School from 4-5 p.m. to see students demonstrate what they have learned at camp.

Art will be on display. ABOVE, Dalton Atwood lines up his shot in archery class during the camp on June 18. Campers choose archery or art in the morning, and drums or dance in the afternoon. RIGHT, students in art class mimic a famous artist's work on a pair of shoes. Tara Farmer, seventh- and eighth-grade art teacher at Casey County Middle School, had students paint on nontraditional surfaces — light-switch covers, sunglasses, shoes. Committee forming to fill circuit judge seat

By Todd Kleffman

The Advocate-Messenger

Efforts to replace late Casey Circuit Judge James G. Weddle, who died two months ago, finally began to take shape Friday when Gov. Steve Beshear appointed four members to the judicial nominating committee that serves the 29th Judicial Circuit.

With Beshear's appointments, the committee has six of the seven members needed to nominate three lawyers from Casey or Adair counties to be forwarded to the governor, who will then pick one to serve on the bench until voters select a new judge in November to fill the remainder of Weddle's term.

State law requires judicial nominating committees to consist of the chief justice of the Supreme Court (currently John D. Minton), two attorneys from the circuit chosen by fellow members of the bar and four citizens — two from each county equally representing both political parties — who are not attorneys and do not hold public office.

From Casey County, Beshear chose Republican Tony Price, a retired banker, and Democrat Frank Kinnaird, a retired principal. Real estate broker and auctioneer Murrell W. Burton and construction foreman Barry W. Stotts, both of Columbia, were Beshear's choices from Adair County.

Those four will join Minton and Columbia attorney Marshall Loy on the nominating committee. The seventh member, another attorney, has not yet been selected. A special election among attorneys in the two counties will be held soon to pick the final member, said Amy Carmen, spokeswoman for the Kentucky Bar Association, which oversees the selection process for attorneys named to judicial nominating committees.

The 29th circuit has been without a full-time circuit judge since Weddle, a Casey County native,

New principal named at Walnut Hill

By Amanda Cole

Staff Writer

Judy Phillips is excited and honored to step into her new role as principal of Walnut Hill Elementary School on July 1.

“I feel very honored to be chosen to be principal of this school,” Phillips said.

She has served as assistant principal to Tim Goodlett at Walnut Hill for the last five years.

“I'm certainly glad that she has gotten the job,” Goodlett said. “She is a very caring person that's interested in the kids and interested in the staff and parents working together to make this school the best school that it can possibly be.”

Phillips has several goals in mind to help build on the success the school is already experiencing.

PHILLIPS

Student achievement

“My main goal is student achievement,” Phillips said.

She would like the school to reach the 90th percentile and become a distinguished school. One way to achieve this is to make sure students are excited to learn.

“I have to be excited first of all and then that gets the teachers motivated and excited, then the teachers get the students motivated and excited,” Phillips said. “All throughout the building, there has to be an excitement for learning for us to see an increase in student achievement.”

Phillips also wants the school to continue linking learning to real life situations. When students can see why they need to learn something that makes it important to them, Phillips said.

Increase attendance

“Good attendance and student achievement go hand-in-hand,” she said. “If the kids aren't here, they can't learn.”

One possible strategy to increase student attendance is to have a large chart in the school that tracks each grade level's attendance every month, Phillips said.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Urges county to fix Upper Brush Creek Road

At approximately 5850 Upper Brush Creek, there is a hump in the road that completely blinds you. At least one car or truck runs off the road weekly. The ditches are so deep it will destroy your car.

They need to tile the ditches and widen the road there or take out the hump to make it safe. I was run off the road this week. I believe everyone who lives on Upper Brush Creek has been run off the road there.

I have seen numerous wrecks (cars and trucks) and two motorcycle wrecks. The neighbor on the right had his tree taken out by a car being run off the road.

Someone is going to be killed there if this is not taken care of.

Life lessons painful

Everyone knows you don't touch an injured animal. It's common sense. I didn't listen to common sense the morning of June 12.

As I was driving to work, I saw a dog on the side of the road in Russell County. I did what I imagine most people do when they see an animal on the roadside, I started mentally saying "Stay. Don't." But he didn't. I braked, but it was inevitable. I hit him and pulled off to the side of the road, turned my hazard lights on and got out of the car.

The dog appeared to be seriously injured as he yelped and limped his way over to me. I didn't know what to do. The dog had on a collar with a latch and a strip of blue nylon rope hanging from it. It obviously had an owner and had escaped from their yard.

I did what I would hope anyone would do if they hit my dog; I stopped and tried to help. I thought the dog appeared calm – hurt, of course – but not aggressive. I reached with my left hand to try to find an ID tag on his collar so I could contact his owner. That's when the dog did what commonsense said it would do. It bit me.

After calling my husband, he came up and said there wasn't anything we could do for the dog. He then sent me home to clean my hand and he went to the closest house to try to find the owner.

I don't blame the dog. I should have known better. It bothers me that I killed a dog, even if it was an accident. It'll probably bother me for a long time.

We've all heard of dog owners coming home to find their dog dead in a ditch. They're angry that the person didn't stop or try to help. Now that I've taken a walk in those shoes, I can understand why some people don't stop. But I do think that people should try to help by trying to inform the owner or calling animal control.

I imagine most people would be like me, wanting to help but completely at a loss for what to do and the right way to go about it. (See Advice)

I learned the lesson of what not to do the hard way. I hope all of you who read this and share it with others never need to experience it first hand – it can be quite painful.

Advice:

The following is advice from Casey County resident Sue Craig, a veterinarian technician at Commonwealth Animal Hospital in Harrodsburg, on what to do if you hit a dog or come up on a dog that's been hit:

Stop when and where it is safe to do so.

Check on the dog from a distance and try to find the owner at nearby homes.

If you can't get near the animal because you're afraid, it's being aggressive, running away from you, etc., call local law enforcement to see if there is a city/county animal control person. Animal control personnel will have the training and safety equipment to handle a traumatized animal. In Casey County, the dog warden is Ricky Luttrell, 787-6821.

If you can help without putting yourself in harms way and feel comfortable doing so, don't run up and grab them. The animal is likely scared and in shock.

Wrap something around the dog's muzzle. Wrap a scarf, rope or old T-shirt in your car gently but firmly a couple times then bring it behind their head to tie it.

Use a blanket or towel as a stretcher to get the dog into your vehicle.

If you can contain the animal, take it to the vet. In some situations, you may be responsible for the bill. Some veterinarians will try to find the owner before making the decision to treat the animal or euthanize it.

Really? Did I need to know all that?

For the most part, I have enjoyed getting on facebook and reconnecting with friends from 40 years ago and even meeting new friends.

I especially love seeing family pictures and those vacation pics, even if someone is bragging about that special trip to Hawaii or Cancun.

In addition, I like to know how to pray for friends and family who are seeking divine intervention and guidance in their lives.

Also, if someone loses 70 pounds or quits smoking, that's good news and should be shared.

However, there are some posts that are beginning to try my patience and I consider myself longsuffering when it comes to certain things on facebook.

What about posts that aren't true? Friends of mine in Georgia keep posting that Kentucky has a law that all welfare recipients are drug tested. Wrong, hasn't passed the legislature.

A friend of mine on facebook recently wrote that he was going through his newsfeed and unfriending anyone who posted cutesy sayings such as "Life without coffee is no life at all!"

While I understand his sentiment, I can also add some categories that are wearing thin.

Pet photos and posters

Before you dog and cat lovers start howling, please understand that there are those of us who sincerely, well, don't like dogs and cats.

Personally, I don't hate them and while I want pets to be cared for and treated humanely, I don't need to see a picture of them every day.

Also, if they are asleep on the floor, I am not thrilled to see a picture of a dog sleeping on the floor.

Hourly updates

I confess that this one really, really irritates me. "Going home for lunch!" And then an hour later comes another post — Had a BLT with my sweetie! Love you hun!"

I mean, who cares? Your daily schedule is of no interest to more than a handful of people and it imparts no knowledge that is of any value to mankind.

We all go to lunch and then back to work so keep that to yourself.

Exercise updates

I have a friend who uses an app to post his daily walk, showing the route, the distance, and how long it took him to walk it. If he was walking the Great Wall of China or Downing Street in London or some other exotic place, then I'm good with that, especially if he's posting pictures.

But when you live in Poodunk (pick any small town), is it breaking news to let the world know that you walked two miles in 40 minutes on a dirt road in the middle of nowhere?

Love notes

The personal love lines to your significant other should also be avoided. These only matter to the two of you, and if your significant other should happen to be angry with you, the note may not matter at all.

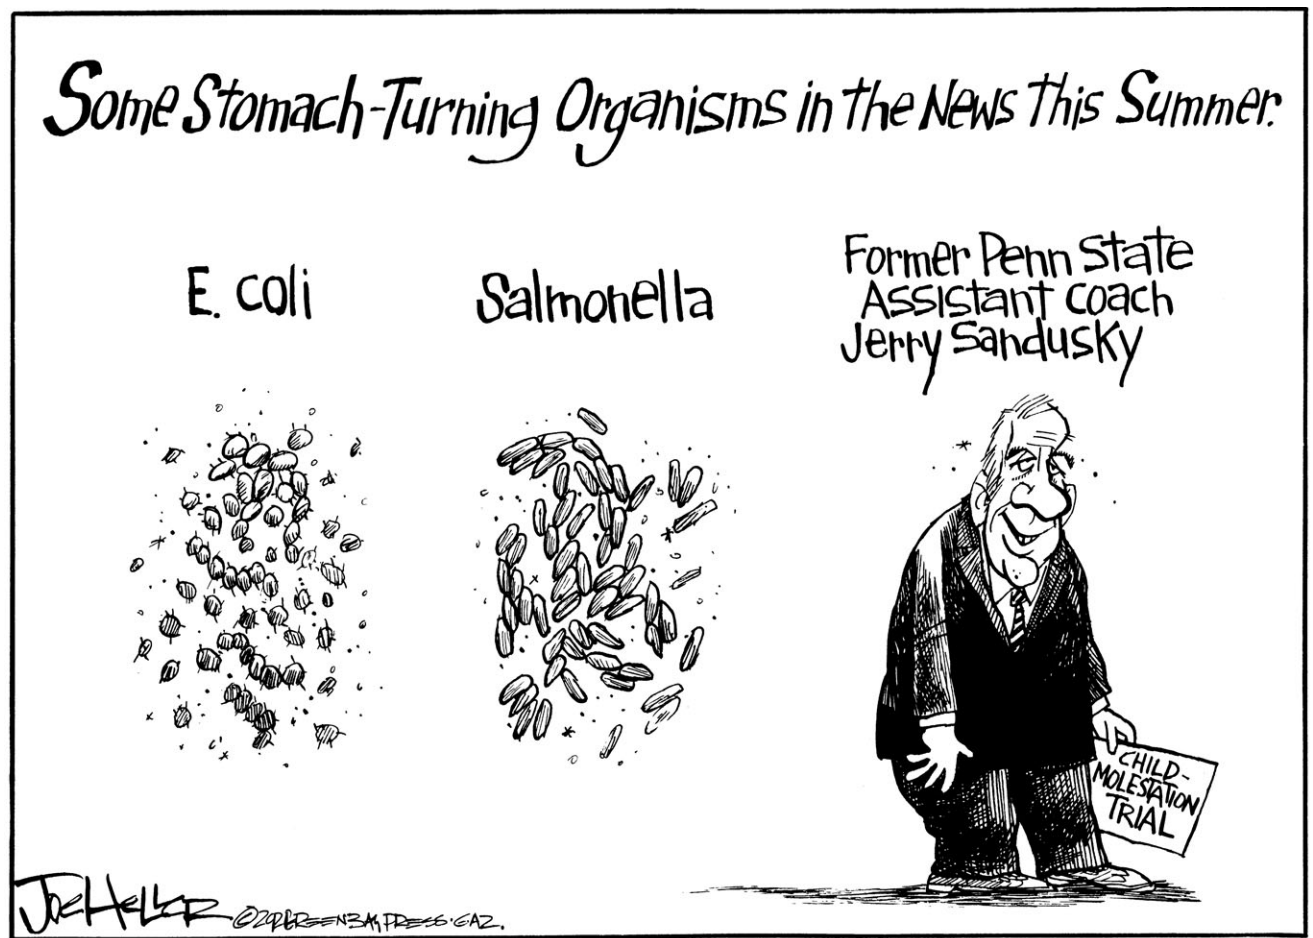

"Hun, you're the greatest and life would not be the same without you," warrants another "Really, did I need to know that?"

Illness

Because you went to the local restaurant, tied on the old feedbag and then contracted a stomach bug, it's not necessary to tell me how many times you threw up and went number two. Tell the Health Department or better yet, talk to the restaurant's owner or manager.

I'm sure there are other things that bug you facebookites so feel free to post them on The Casey County News facebook page.

But please, hun, like us first.

The newspaper — pick it up and read it!!

No, I don't mean the Bible, although I read it every day.

But for now, I'm referring to the newspaper.

"Ahh, the newspaper," you say. "You mean that old dinosaur of the printed era that's somehow managed to stay alive, despite its shrinking advertising revenue and a dwindling subscriber base?"

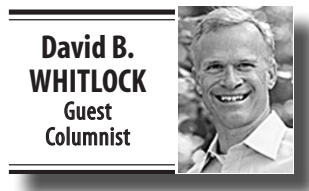

Despite rumors of its demise, the newspaper is surviving and in some instances, thriving.

I know that's the exception and not the norm. According to a 2010 Harris Poll, 1-in-10 American adults say they never read a daily newspaper, and only 2-of-5 read a daily newspaper, either online or in print.

That's really not surprising, since Americans read less today. According to a 2007 study by the National Endowment of the Humanities, reading levels among young adults has plummeted over the last two decades. The average person between ages 15 and 24 spends 2 to 2 1/2 hours a day watching TV and seven minutes reading.

So, I was shocked but probably shouldn't have been when I read that The Times-Picayune, the paper of New Orleans, La., established in 1837 and winner of several Pulitzer Prizes, will scale down its print edition to three days a week this fall, as will several other newspapers owned by its parent company.

Newspapers have long been a part of my life. Many times, after a day in elementary school,

I would wait on my front porch for the afternoon delivery of the Altus Times-Democrat. We subscribed to several newspapers. Back then, the Daily Oklahoman had a morning edition as well as an evening edition, The Oklahoma City Times. I devoured both, as well as the morning edition of The Lawton Constitution. Occasionally, Dad would purchase the Times Record News of Wichita Falls, Texas, but I looked with skepticism upon anything from the Longhorn State.

Sunday afternoon, having feasted on Mom's delicious pot roast, was given to reading the newspaper. My brothers and father would divide out the sections of the paper, and soon they would be strewn about the den, one section on the couch, another across the recliner, each waiting to be read by one of us.

Today, I subscribe to several newspapers and whenever I'm visiting another town or city, I make sure to get a local paper, for each has its unique features reflective of its constituency.

Newspapers keep me aware of the world in which I happen to live.

As blogger Tracey Dickerson has noted, it was the great Swiss theologian, Karl Barth, who in an interview with Time Magazine in 1966, advised young theologians "to take your Bible and take your newspaper, and read both. But interpret newspapers from your Bible."

Barth was reminding believers that although they are not to be of the world, they are yet in it, and as such, they should know the world in which they live. Moreover, Christians should be a discerning, reflective people.

But believers certainly haven't cornered the market on thinking. Whether you think like a theologian or are simply a thinker, the newspaper can stimulate your mind to a broader awareness of what's going on in the world around you, whether it's news about the local community, municipal government, available jobs, the nation, or broader geo-political issues that affect us all, often unknowingly.

Of course, when Barth spoke those words, the internet didn't exist, nor did CNN or Fox News. We have access to news 24/7, through dozens of portals, more news than we can digest.

It shouldn't be a question of either/or but an affirmation of both the internet and the printed page.

The question we must ask ourselves is, what's the quality of the news reports we are getting? Are we receiving information based on thorough investigative reporting?

It's easy to watch any number of news talk shows. I do on occasion. While interesting, and often hosted by knowledgeable and talented people, they are usually, by the very nature of the ratings race, skewed toward drama, hype, and superficiality.

The challenge for newspapers is to provide the financial resources for quality reporting, whether it's reporting by a local or regional paper or one of the major dailies.

How then can newspapers survive? Billionaire Warren Buffett, who is in the process of purchasing 26 daily newspapers and has had success with others, writes that newspapers fail when one more of the following factors are present: (1) the town or city has more than one competing dailies, (2) the newspaper is no longer the primary source of information for the readers, (3) or the town or city does not have a "pervasive identity."

Surviving and even thriving is a challenge, but it's worth the try, and that brings me back to Karl Barth. I've got my Bible in one hand: I've read where it will last forever. It's the newspaper which concerns me, for without it, my application of the Bible to the world would be diminished.

EDA gives $25K to new college

By Larry Rowell
Staff Writer

The money keeps rolling in for the new college projected to be built in downtown Liberty at Jockey and Pettyjohn Streets.

Aside from a $250,000 matching funds commitment from Casey County Fiscal Court and another proposed $250,000 matching funds commitment from Liberty City Council, members of the Liberty Casey County Economic Development Authority voted Monday to give an additional $25,000 to the college building project, bringing the EDA's commitment to $125,000.

And, according to Liberty Mayor Steve Sweeney, grant funding in the form of a Community Development Block Grant should bring the $3 million project closer to reality.

EDA Director Blaine Staat said that currently, there's $90,695.76 in the construction account.

CMW, an architectural firm in Lexington, has been given the go-ahead to begin work on building design and doing the necessary work in preparation for grant submission deadlines this summer.

CMW officials will be at City Hall June 29 at 10 a.m. to discuss the project and meet with the public.

Members also heard Staat say that the EDA has $645,741.95 in the bank, of which $302,734.55 is in the CDBG Liberty Tank account, $212,794.49 is a CDBG loan repayment account with Liberty Tank, $90,695.76 is for the college project, and there's $39,517.15 in the checking account.

Staat said that there is currently $1,093,076 in outstanding loans and property payments owed to the EDA.

Chieftain Steel has loans in the amount of $678,152 while Bluegrass Shavings has loans totaling $414,924. Also, Bluegrass Shavings has a $1 million dollar CDBG loan which will also be repaid to the EDA. Staat said that all loan accounts are current.

Increase parent involvement

"Kids do so much better when parents are involved in their education," Phillips said. "It has to be a team effort between parents and teachers and administrators."

Phillips wants parents to feel welcome in the school and feel comfortable coming to her with any questions or concerns.

"Parents are going to be invited to any and all activities, and we are going to encourage their involvement," Phillips said.

Improve discipline plan

"Teachers have to be able to teach without classroom disruptions," Phillips said. "We have to have discipline in the building."

Phillips wants to continue with the "Stop, Walk, and Talk" and "Positive Behavior Interventions and Support" (PBIS) programs.

Phillips was instrumental in starting PBIS, which teaches behavioral expectations the same as any core subject.

"We collect data with this system that helps us respond to different situations and know where the behaviors are occurring and what time of day," she said. The data is then used to help identify the problem to come up with an effective intervention. The program originated with the Kentucky Center for Instructional Discipline (KyCID).

Before joining Walnut Hill as assistant principal in 2007, Phillips served as principal of Douglas Elementary for seven years. Prior to that she taught fifth grade at Douglas for six years.

Phillips holds a bachelor of science in elementary education from Lindsey Wilson College and received her master of arts in middle school education from Campbellsville University in 1996.

A Casey County native, Phillips was married to the late Ronnie Joe Phillips and has two daughters. Her oldest daughter, Kelly Waddle, teaches physical education at Hopkins Elementary in Somerset. Jamie Phillips of Liberty teaches third grade at Jones Park Elementary.

Phillips is excited and looking forward to her first year as principal at Walnut Hill.

"There are many challenges ahead and I certainly don't have all the answers, but what I do have is a talented and dedicated staff to focus on solutions to any challenges that we may face," Phillips said. "And that's important to have that kind of personnel in the building."

Dates to remember:

Open house for Walnut Hill Elementary is Aug. 2 at 6 p.m. The first day of school for students is Aug. 8.

ment included. Phil's Vac Shop was given the bid for janitorial services at the Casey Judicial Center at $3,795 a month. Prairie Farms was awarded the milk contract for the Casey County Detention Center, Brown Food Service won the bid for food service supplies and hygiene items for the jail, and Advanced Drainage Systems had the low bid for 15-inch plastic road tile at $6.03 a foot and $8.32 a foot for 18-inch tile. Detroit Salt was once again the low bidder on road salt for the county at $78.75 a ton for 300 tons. Wright said that not a lot of salt was used last winter and the county may not need to buy salt if there's another mild winter.

■ Heard Wright say that state road funds have been received to construct a bridge on Hamm Road and replace the wooden bridge on Egypt Creek with a concrete structure.

The $92,000 for the projects are on an 80/20 match. Wright also told the court that up to $200,000 had been granted for repaving of the county's secondary roads.

■ Approved Treasurer Debbie Vaughn's monthly report, which shows the following fund balances: General, $441,271.24; Road, $39,083.95; Jail, $814,917.41; LGEA, $70,542.06; State, $52,003.40; and E-911, $19,646.01.

Vaughn also reported that from May 22-June 18, the Central Kentucky AG/ EXPO Center had receipts of $13,004.05 and expenses of $12,306.15 for a net profit of $697.90.

The largest expenses came in the form of $6,969.37 for repairs while $1,411.20 was spent on the grounds.

■ Heard Wright recommend that Jennifer Harsey, the ag center director, be granted a $1.25 an hour raise, bringing her salary to $13.65 an hour.

■ Went into executive session for 35 minutes to discuss personnel issues. Wright said that no action was taken on the matter.

passed away on April 12 after serving more than 12 years on the bench. At least three different special judges have been assigned to the counties to fill in until a new judge is chosen.

Casey Circuit Clerk Craig Overstreet said that criminal and judicial dockets continue to move along at a steady pace, but workers at Casey's judicial center are ready to have someone in place on a more permanent basis.

"Each judge does things differently, they all have their own little quirks, so it takes some getting used to," Overstreet said. "We need a full-time judge."

Efforts to form the nominating committee were delayed when one of Beshear's selections from Casey County, James Wilkerson, died last month, said Parry Barrows, a spokeswoman in the governor's office. Wilkerson was replaced by Kinnaird.

Kim Neal of the Administrative Office of the Courts said there is no established timetable for selecting a nominating committee or for that committee to forward three candidates to the governor for consideration. Once the governor gets the names, however, he has 60 days to name the new judge, Neal said.

The new judge will only have the job until the Nov. 6 general election, when voters will pick someone to serve out the remainder of Weddle's term, which runs until 2014.

Judy Vance, an attorney from Columbia who ran unsuccessfully for district judge in 2006, has already filed as a candidate for circuit judge in the non-partisan race.

State plays major role in energy production

When it comes to energy, it could be said that Kentucky burns the candle from both ends. That’s because only four states produce more power than we do, and only seven use more per person.

That’s not surprising, of course, since Kentucky plays prominent roles nationally in coal production as well as manufacturing, especially in the auto and aluminum industries.

What is less well known are the finer details behind our overall energy usage. Recently, the state’s Energy and Environment Cabinet shed a little more light on that, when it released an in-depth study of what it takes to run our homes and businesses and keep our cars on the road.

It’s difficult to imagine numbers so large, but in 2009, our state used 41 million tons of coal, 125 million barrels of petroleum and 206 billion cubic feet of natural gas. The price tag: $17.4 billion.

Transportation and industrial needs accounted for almost three-fourths of our energy needs, while the remainder was split among our homes and commercial businesses. It’s here where we can see the true effect of the nation’s economic downturn, because consumption that year was five percent less than in 2008.

In energy production, Kentucky relies on coal about twice as much as the nation, and our rates are much cheaper as a result. Most of our coal, however, is exported to other states. Florida and Tennessee are the biggest customers of the coal mined in Western Kentucky, while South Carolina and Georgia are the top destinations for coal from Eastern Kentucky.

Although coal is by far the biggest fossil fuel we produce, we’re seeing a strong surge in natural gas as well; its production went up almost a fifth between 2009 and 2010.

As the country looks for ways to boost home-grown energy, conservation and renewables are also getting more attention, and Kentucky is playing a leading role here as well.

Renewable energy production in the commonwealth saw double-digit growth in 2009, with hydroelectric sources providing half of the total. Wood, biomass, ethanol and then geothermal made up the other half.

There are some truly innovative things going on with this field. In 2010, for example, we opened the nation’s first energy-neutral schools, meaning they produce as much as they need over a calendar year. One of those schools, located in Warren County, has enough solar energy capacity on a sunny day to run the equivalent of 50 homes.

We’ve come a long way in this area during the last six years. Then, we didn’t have a single school meeting the stringent federal ENERGY STAR standards; now, we have 125.

When it comes to renewable energy research, we’re seeing such things as the University of Kentucky building a $20 million lab dedicated to this field and the University of Louisville using its single biggest private donation – also $20 million – for ongoing work in this area as well. That school is also looking for ways to turn biomass into jet fuel, which will undoubtedly help nearby UPS in the air while the company is converting the ground fleet at its Louisville processing center to handle a 20 percent biodiesel blend.

The General Assembly has passed legislation in recent years, meanwhile, that is spurring research in clean-coal technology and making it easier for companies to transport carbon dioxide to storage sites.

Out in the state, we’re also seeing some great progress. In Hopkinsville and Owensboro, we have two major players in the production of ethanol and biodiesel fuel. Winchester is home to one of the world’s largest algae production facilities, which also makes biofuel.

In Monticello, they’re using some of the space designed for houseboats to turn out energy-efficient homes; Berea has its own solar “farm”; and Martin County is working to convert gas from its garbage into electricity. Perdue Farms is doing the same from gas generated at a chicken processing unit, and even the Kentucky Horse Park is trying to get more horsepower, so to speak, out of the manure its horses produce.

In the home, meanwhile, there were 34,000 rebates given to Kentuckians last year who bought energy-saving appliances, and nearly 200 farms tapped another program designed to increase energy efficiency.

As all of these examples show, Kentucky plays a major role when it comes to energy, no matter how it’s produced or how it’s used. It’s a trend that we hope can continue long into the future, because there is no doubt that we have a lot more to offer.

11 die on Kentucky roadways June 11-17

Preliminary statistics* indicate that eleven people died in eleven separate crashes on Kentucky roadways from Monday, June 11, through Sunday, June 17, 2012.

Seven of the fatalities involved motor vehicles and four victims were not wearing seat belts. Single-fatality crashes occurred in Boone, Hardin, Jefferson, Laurel, Letcher, McCracken and Warren counties. The crashes in Letcher and McCracken counties involved the suspected use of alcohol.

There were four motorcycle involved fatalities that occurred in Fayette, Jefferson (2) and Perry counties.

Through June 17, 2012, preliminary statistics* indicate that 337 people have lost their lives on Kentucky roadways during 2012. This is 44 more fatalities than reported for the same time period in 2011. There have been 278 motor vehicle fatalities and 158 of those victims were not wearing seat belts. Thirty-two of those crashes involved a commercial motor vehicle. Thirty-one crashes involved a motorcycle and sixteen victims were not wearing helmets. Three crashes involved an ATV and two victims were not wearing helmets. Twenty-four crashes involved a pedestrian and one involved a bicycle. Fifty-eight deaths have resulted from crashes involving the suspected use of alcohol.

Citizens can contribute to highway safety by reporting erratic drivers to the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. Callers will remain anonymous and should give a description of the vehicle, location, direction of travel and license number if possible.

These statistics are still preliminary as KSP waits for all local law enforcement agencies throughout the state to report any crashes and fatalities that may have occurred in their areas. Crash data for this report is generated from the Kentucky Fatality Analysis Reporting System (FARS).*

AROUND THE AREA

Church youth volunteers helping local residents

ADAIR COUNTY — Kentucky Heartland Outreach (KHO), a nonprofit organization based in Campbellsville, provides housing improvements to qualifying individuals as a part of its ministry.

Kentucky Heartland Outreach was started in 2000 as part of Campbellsville University to give back to the community and meet the needs of those who were in true need of help. Two years later, KHO became an independent nonprofit organization.

Each summer church youth groups from all across Kentucky and several other states come to Campbellsville University for a week-long “camp.” While at the camp, the volunteers, guided by trained leaders, go to several different counties across the state and do home improvements for selected individuals.

This year, Adair County was one of six counties in which KHO chose to work.

KHO Client Advocate Heather Hensley said they had 117 volunteers working in Adair County doing eight different projects. She went on to say that their grants provided funding for them to do roofs, decks, handicapped ramps and steps and rails.

KHO has planned six different camps this summer. After the volunteers finish in Adair County, another group will work in Green County. They will move their base of operations to Eubank and will work in Pulaski, Lincoln, Casey and Rockcastle counties for the four weeks after that.

Family court gets new quarters

BOYLE COUNTY — Renovations on the Boyle County courthouse will soon provide space for family court. Former storage space on the third floor will now contain the new courtroom, offices, and a restroom for family court. A space on the second floor below the new courtroom facilities is also being renovated for offices for family court Judge Bruce Petrie and staff, private meeting areas for attorneys and their clients, and restrooms. A staircase will connect the areas on second and third floors.

Family courts are a division of circuit court but also hear some cases that were handled in district court in the past. Family court has broad jurisdiction over matters including divorce, child custody, child support and adoption and includes some stages of domestic violence cases, as well as abuse and neglect issues.

Judge Petrie, who also presides in Mercer County, has had to schedule his docket around circuit and district courts in Boyle County in order to use the courtrooms.

The renovations, which are expected to cost around $180,000, will probably be completed in August. The county will be reimbursed by the Administrative Office of the Courts.

Five employees receive $20,000 in back pay

LINCOLN COUNTY — A complaint filed with the Kentucky Labor Cabinet against the city of Hustonville in March resulted in an audit that determined five employees had not been paid appropriately according to the pay scale. The city has paid the five employees $20,189.40 to correct the problem. In addition to the money paid to the employees, Hustonville was fined $1,250 for the violation.

Mayor Marc Spivey said he was unaware of why the employees had not been paid properly as the infraction had occurred during the tenure of the former mayor, Cecil Maddox.

Mayor Spivey said Hustonville finances and budget have not been substantially harmed by paying the employees this sum. He said that the city had appropriate funding to handle such situations.

Spivey also said that the new pay-scale ordinance recently passed by the city council was created to prevent the possibility of improper payments to employees.

Inmate still on the loose

MARION COUNTY — The Kentucky State Police was still attempting to locate a Middlesboro man who walked away from the Marion Adjustment Center on May 29.

George Wesley Upton, 33, was serving a 10-year sentence for first-degree wanton endangerment on a police officer and first-degree fleeing and evading.

Upton is a 5'11", 173 pound white male with brown hair and blue eyes. He has tattoos on his back, chest, neck, and both arms.

He may be driving a 1993 GMC Sierra pickup that is blue and silver in color. It was reported stolen from a residence in Lebanon on May 30.

Possible natural gas conversion at power station

PULASKI COUNTY — Somerset is doing initial studies to determine the feasibility of supplying natural gas as a source of power for Unit 1 at John Sherman Cooper Power Plant in order to bring the coal-fired electric generator at Burnside into compliance with federal regulations that will be effective in 2015.

No emissions-control equipment has been added to Unit 1 since it went on line in 1965. The federal Mercury and Air Toxics Standards, effective in 2015, could force shutdown of Unit 1, which is owned and operated by East Kentucky Power Cooperative.

Improvements would include replacing existing 8-inch capacity parallel natural gas transmission lines from a Texas Eastern Gas Transmission Corporation (TEGTC) terminal in Casey County with a 20-inch main.

Somerset currently gets natural gas from a pipeline installed during the 1970s to a collection network in Eastern Kentucky, as well as from a TEGTC terminal from the west. Somerset Gas Service is in final stages of planning a state-of-the-art energy center to maximize natural gas as an energy source.

Jamestown woman killed; suspect arrested

RUSSELL COUNTY — Christopher Allman, 28, of Jamestown, has been arrested for the murder of a Jamestown woman who did not return from a morning jog on June 14. Sarah Roberts Hart, 31, had turned back from a run with her sister, Elizabeth, after becoming ill. When Elizabeth returned to their vehicle, Sarah could not be located and authorities were notified of her disappearance.

Police dogs, as well as a KSP helicopter and a multitude of volunteers from the community, were utilized in the extensive search before Sarah's body was located a short distance off a sidewalk on U.S. 127 between Jamestown and Russell Springs.

According to a report released by the Kentucky State Police, preliminary autopsy results from the KSP Medical Examiner's office indicate that Sarah died as a result of asphyxiation due to strangulation.

Allman is charged with murder, first-degree robbery, kidnapping and tampering with physical evidence.

According to KSP detective B.J. Burton, Allman admitted killing Hart “for the purpose of taking her money.” He is being held without bond at the Russell County Detention Center.

Funeral services for Sarah, who was expecting her fourth child at the time of her death, were conducted Monday.

Campbellsville man on “Redneck Island” on CMT

TAYLOR COUNTY — Rob Harris of Campbellsville has long dreamed of competing on a reality show. Recently his dream came true when he became a contestant on CMT's “Redneck Island”.

Harris said the show's producers sent him an application that was 47 pages long. After they received his application, they flew him to California for a few days for interviews.

He was not originally chosen to be a part of the competition but someone who was scheduled to be on the show got hurt and had to leave. Harris was chosen as a replacement.

Harris said the most difficult aspect of the show for him was learning to adjust to life on the beach.

Despite the hardships, he has an itch to compete again.

“Redneck Island” airs new episodes every Saturday at 10 p.m. on CMT and repeats at various times throughout the week.

Best baits for Green River fishing

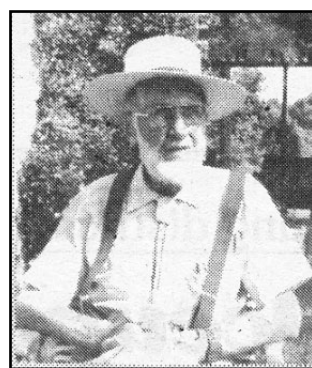

Originally published in the May 3, 1962 issue of The Casey County News

Doc Short of Middleburg is an authority on fishing Green River for bass. This week we asked him what his favorite baits were. He said he finally got down to four and listed them in order of their effectiveness.

Tandem Spinner - Seems to work best with guinea tail streamer. By far the most successful bait. Its faults are that it drags hard and hangs on everything. It must be used out of a boat, unless one wishes to lose a lot of them.

Drive-O-Reno - Most effective with yellow belly and green top. Drags well and does not hang up much. Can be used deep, bouncing off the bottom.

Hildebrand Flapper - With black body and tail.

Jitterbug - He likes them with white bodies. This, of course, is a surface bait and is effective at night, early in the morning, and late in the fall.

We found this quite interesting, because we use none of these baits. Our favorite is red worm plastic jobs with three hooks. It is a good catcher, because the bass is generally hooked deep with one of more hooks and stays on. Our second choice is a No. 2 Johnson spoon in silver used with porkrins. It can be dragged on the bottom, over lilly pads and tree tops.

Clifton Lester, Chester Riggins, Hubert Cornett and several others probably swear by an entirely different group. All of them catch fish successfully.

You may fill college aid gap with loan from KHESLC

Kentucky parents who need help paying for a child's college expenses may want to consider a Kentucky Advantage Parent Loan from the Kentucky Higher Education Student Loan Corporation (KHESLC).

The low-cost, state-based loan can fill the gap between other financial aid a student receives and the total cost of education.

It has a fixed interest rate lower than that of the Federal PLUS Loan. In addition, a parent can use the KHESLC loan to help pay for a student attending graduate or professional school.

Students should apply for all free aid, such as grants and scholarships, and Federal Stafford Loans before parents turn to a private loan.

To qualify, a borrower must:

- Be the parent or stepparent of an undergraduate or graduate student, as determined by the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA).

- Be a Kentucky resident.
- Be a U.S. citizen or a non-citizen with a proof of residency card.
- Have an acceptable credit history or an approved co-signer.

The loan is only available to parents who reside in Kentucky.

Borrowers who begin repaying the loan while in school pay a fixed interest rate of 7.25 percent and a 2 percent guarantee fee. If payments are postponed until after the student finishes school, the interest rate will be 7.75 percent and a guarantee fee of 3 percent.

Borrowers will also receive a 0.5 percent interest rate reduction for auto debit payments.

Applications may be submitted online at www.kheslc.com. For more information, call 888-678-4625.

Be sure to travel safe and smart this summer

Summer is upon us, and for many, the season means at least one family vacation or weekend getaway. According to a 2011 Trip Advisor survey, 90 percent of Americans were planning to take two or more leisure trips within the next year and 24 percent were planning five or more trips. Of those surveyed, 79 percent said they plan to spend at least $3,000 on these vacations. As you start planning your next vacation, you can take precautions to keep yourself, your family and your finances safe when you travel.

Whether you plan your own trip or use a travel agent, you should watch out for travel fraud. Ask friends and family for referrals when looking for a reputable travel agent. When working with an agent, always ask about the items that are not included in the travel package so you can plan for those extra expenses. Remember that companies or individuals that cold-contact you are often scam artists. If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Using your credit card to book a trip or pay for a travel package can allow you to dispute any scams.

Many travel agents and certain websites may suggest that you buy travel insurance. Travel insurance is not a requirement, but can protect you in the event that you need to cancel your trip or have any unforeseen expenses, such as medical problems or emergency evacuations, while vacationing. In most cases, the more risks that are covered in a policy, the more expensive it is.

Take time to review your current situation and get several quotes on prices and policies to determine whether the coverage offered outweighs its cost.

When packing for a trip, remember certain necessities as airline tickets or confirmation, passports, driver's licenses, hotel reservations and any prescription medications. Make sure these items are in a place where you can easily locate them, such as an airplane carry-on bag or in a designated spot in a car.

Do your research to find a reputable hotel in a safe area that will best suit your needs. Upon arrival, secure any valuable belongings in the hotel's safe, if one is available.

Unfortunately thefts do occur in the lodging industry, and most hotels will only accept responsibility for items placed in their safe. You can minimize your risk of being a victim of theft while you're away from your hotel room by leaving the television on at a level that can be heard from outside the room and placing a privacy sign on the door to give potential thieves the idea that someone is in the room. Do not put out a sign asking for maid service as that's often a sign of an unoccupied room.

goals do you have for the future?

Cole Burke graduated from Casey County High School in the spring of 2011 after finishing two years as a left guard on the offensive line of the Rebel football team. Burke now plays the same position on the collegiate level for the Campbellsville University Tigers. Former Rebel teammate Tyler Stephens will be joining Burke on the field as a Tiger this coming fall.

RH: What have you liked most about your collegiate athlete experience so far?

CB: Meeting new people really. I made more friends. It's a lot different from high school but a great experience. The big thing is making new friends that will last a lifetime.

RH: Have you accomplished any major goals or milestones while on the collegiate level or been a part of any special awards or accomplishments at your school?

CB: Well, one of them is an academic achievement. I didn't prepare myself in high school and going into college, I wanted to do a lot better. I wanted to maintain a 3.3 (grade point average) and I did that. One of my goals is to maintain this.

RH: How many seasons do you have left and what

CB: Right now I'm in the rotations (for playing) so I would like to get in the starting line up before I graduate.

RH: Will football will still be a part of your active life post-college?

CB: Something that I want to do is coach. Yes, I'd like to carry that on.

RH: Did you play closely with Tyler Stephens when you were both at Casey County even though he was a couple of years behind you?

CB: We played right beside each other every game.

RH: Are you excited to see a familiar face joining you?

CB: Yeah, that's good. It's always good to have one of your homeboys there.

RH: What are you studying currently and do you have any post-graduation plans?

CB: Right now I'm majoring in history (secondary) education and that's all that I've decided so far, but that may change. You never know.

Editor's Note: Throughout the summer, Sports Correspondent Rita Harris will catch up with various Casey County Rebel and Lady Rebel alumni who have gone on to pursue athletics after high school in this new seasonal feature, Alumni Spotlight.

SPORTS TALK

No baseball or softball for 2012 Olympics

If you were given 30 seconds to name as many sports off of the top of your head as you could, what do you think the first few would be?

Basketball.
Baseball.
Football.
Tennis.
Track.

Those aren't in any preferential order but just the ones that came to mind first. Notice the first three. How many people would have probably named those in their first five? I would venture to guess that most people I know would have.

Basketball, baseball and football are in the top most televised sports in America with hockey being up there also. All three have highly followed professional programs in the states.

Despite their American popularity, the entire human race does not care about these three sports like we do. Now, it comes as no surprise to me to categorize our football as a very American sport. Let's face it: most other cultures have a different sport called football that we have our own other name for: soccer.

Therefore, football's seldom appearances in the Olympics is nothing that I've really pondered. However, I just realized that the upcoming London Olympics will not be featuring baseball or softball and that did surprise me.

Rita "Peat" HARRIS
Sports Correspondent

This is actually very old news as the International Olympic Committee (IOC) made the decision in 2005. With the 2008 Olympic planning well underway they did not cut the events from Beijing but only London. It was the first cut of any sports in 69 years.

It does not mean the baseball and softball will never again be Olympic sports. The IOC casts voting on the participating events for each set of games so any given sport is up for a chance to be added or dropped on a given round of the games.

For baseball (and softball) the dilemma in the committee's mind was that many of the attention-getters in the sport do not even compete in the Olympics due to the long, demanding schedules of Major League Baseball players. That's not to mention baseball is a very American sport; not quite the same crowd draw in other countries.

Olympics

Baseball and softball are definitely on the docket for voting their way back in for the 2020 games but they are pitted against several other sports I was surprised to realize are not current Olympic events like karate and squash.

Additionally, a couple of other well-known sports you will not be seeing this summer are golf or rugby; however, both will return to the agenda in Rio de Janeiro in 2016.

It is a shame to see certain games not get the chance to compete in this world-wide stage. As 'cool' as it is for anyone to go pro, claiming an Olympic medal is a whole new ball game—no pun intended. There is accomplishment in simply being Olympic athlete—no medal necessary. Not having the opportunity to vie for that title because your sport is not on the agenda is a let down for any athlete.

Having said that, I understand the need for continued re-evaluation of which sports will be on the docket and only allowing for so many.

First, the popularity from one country to the next is all over the place. I would venture to guess soccer is the only exception, if there is one.

Second, my word! Do a Google search for "unusual" or "obscure" sports. Talk about some ridiculous ideas and games out there! Can you imagine if every game that had popularity in some part of the world had its spot on the Olympic level what kind of games we would see every four years? Yes, limits and re-evaluation are necessary.

On the flip side, the Olympics give a burst of popularity, interest and following to sports that are not always in the limelight. Gymnastics are always a summer favorite, as is beach volleyball. When else are these popular televised sports? I cannot say I have watched them any time outside of the Olympics, but during those two weeks, I thoroughly enjoy them both.

Of course, every year brings different excitement. We can all recall our eyes and ears being tuned to swimming in 2008 as Michael Phelps stole gold after gold. I do not keep up with swimming but that summer I sure did.

There is always a chance our favorite sport will not make the Olympic agenda one ear, but the good news is there is plenty of other excitement in store. There is a good chance you can find some extraordinary athletes and competition in a sport you may not typically lend your attention.

ECCWD moving ahead with $1.5M water project

By Amanda Cole
Staff Writer

The East Casey County Water District's $1.5 million-project is moving forward.

The water project, funded with a low-interest state revolving loan, includes about 20 miles of new water lines, a 200,000-gallon water tank, two water pumps and one pneumatic pressure tank building, ECCWD Manager Andy Greynolds said.

At the water board's meeting on June 12, Greynolds said that surveying was completed for the four sites needed for the project.

"We have to acquire these four spots. We've got two of them. Two are still in the process," he said. "Then we can bid it."

The new lines will help get publicly-treated water to the low-density population areas of Brown Ridge and Sand Knob in the eastern parts of the county.

"These lines are to people who don't have water," Greynolds said. "We are down to the last eight or nine percent that don't have access yet."

The 200,000-gallon tank and one pump will be placed at a site off Singleton Drive - across from Jones Park Elementary - to provide a better supply for Yosemite and Middleburg. The population has grown since the pipes were first laid in 1979, Greynolds said.

The addition of Jones Park, a school serving about 460 students, has also increased the need for water storage and flow to that area.

Once the four road frontage sites, ranging from 25-by-25 feet to 100-by-100 feet, have been acquired, Greynolds hopes the bidding process will start.

The plans are awaiting approval at the Kentucky Division of Water. It will be 3-6 months before digging can start, Greynolds said.

The board reported that the new seven percent rate increase for water the City of Liberty sells to ECCWD should take effect July 1 pending approval by the Public Service Commission. The rate increase will mean ECCWD customers will pay an additional 17 cents per 1,000 gallons of water used, which will add about $2 a month to the average customers' bill.

Hospital

$85,000 and the annual city tax is $191.25. The state and county tax, including the tax districts bring another $700.40, according to Casey County PVA Eric Brown. The 1300-square foot house sits on a 100 foot by 150 foot lot.

The Meeks' property was assessed in 2008 at $50,000 and city taxes are $112.50, Brown said. State and county taxes, including the tax districts, generated an additional $412.50.

The house has 1,250 square feet and sits on a 50 foot by 215 foot lot.

Tungate said he thinks these figures are minimal when weighed against the number of employees who work at the hospital.

"We have 252 employees and added 50 jobs when the new hospital opened (in Sept.

2008)," Tungate said, adding that these new jobs should more than make up for the loss in tax base.

The last time the hospital purchased property was on Sept. 23, 2009 when the board agreed to pay Dustin Foster $55,000 for property on Wolford Avenue.

Regular meeting

The board approved the $17.4 million Fiscal Year 2013 budget, presented by Controller Rich Hendershot. This budget represents a $600,000 increase over FY 12.

The district anticipates taking in $27.6 million in patient revenue; however, following deductions of charity, bad debts, and contractual adjustments, that revenue projection drops to $17.2 million.

The remainder of revenue comes from tax revenues, interest income, and contributions, projected at $732,869, and the Smart 340B program adds another $250,000.

The district is projecting $17.3 million in expenses, up $1.1 million over the previous year. The bulk is for salaries, expected to be just over $9 million, with an added $1.6 million for employee benefits. professional fees account for $1.5 million, while interest on the hospital's loan payment is $1.07 million.

Hendershot said that the projected net income for the hospital, which also includes Casey County Family Practice and Casey County Primary Care, is $1.1 million.

Hendershot also presented the district's income statement for January-April, which shows a net income of $144,545. The total fund balance as of April 30 was $5.9 million.

The board also approved the three-year capital spending plan, authorizing $1.5 million for equipment in FY 13.

One big ticket item in the capital plan is $920,000 for a closed M.R.I. machine in the radiology department.

Other matters

In other matters, the board: ■ Charged off bad debts of $28,314.57 and $1,379.41 in charity.

■ Heard Tungate say that the hospital was "sealed off" for about four hours that afternoon over an alleged threat overheard at a local pharmacy. Tungate said that no patients or employees were ever in danger nor were patients denied entry to the hospital.

According to Liberty Police Chief Steven Garrett, no arrest was made in the case.

Dennis Lanham met country music singer George Jones at Fan Fare in Nashville, Tenn. in 1995.
